System One, a Pittsburgh-based staffing firm, announced this week that it had acquired another staffing firm with offices in Oklahoma and Texas.

The acquired firm, the Rowland Group, will become a System One division and continue to operate under its current brand. With the acquisition, System One will enter the Tulsa, Oklahoma market for the first time, as well as strengthen its presence in Houston.

The Rowland Group was founded more than 25 years ago and specializes in staffing for the energy, engineering, information technology and accounting and finance industries. The financial details of the acquisition were not disclosed.

“Our companies’ services align seamlessly to support our clients’ goals for efficient and cost-effective operations,” Troy Gregory, President and CEO of System One, said in a statement. “The Rowland Group acquisition deepens our expertise within multiple business areas and expands our national presence.”
