A British start-up that plans to create a WeWork-style coworking space (<https://www.telegraph.co.uk/technology/0/hailed-office-future-does-wework-really-have-magic-formula/>) for musicians has raised £1.9m from investors including Investec founder Bernard Kantor.

The Qube is preparing to open a 16,000 square foot office space in west London in the autumn which will include 30 studios.

The venue will also include photography and video-editing facilities, which will be available for members to use with a monthly subscription.

Amin Hamzianpour, the company's chief executive, said that he set up the business with
